La Source Rosé 2012

Judging by the huge number of vibrant pink boxes that are being loaded on to our vans, Château de Sours' iconic rosé is being enjoyed right across the country in this glorious summer sunshine.

But have you taken a detour to the inside track and discovered the Château's super-cuvée: La Source?

The grapes, 80% Merlot and 20% Cabernet Franc, are hand harvested from a special selection of the best parcels of vines on the estate and, unlike the Château rosé which sees no oak at all, 50% of La Source is fermented in a mixture of new and second year barrels before being blended and aged for 9 months on its lees in French oak, bringing a lovely plumpness and structure to the fruit and making it delicious on its own and also with food.

Just 4,000 bottles of this wine are made for world-wide distribution.

La Source du Château de Sours Rosé 2012	13%	6	£15.50	£93.00

Very pale pink, oeil de perdrix, with a nose of sweet plump white fruits, some redcurrants too, leading to a lovely, vibrant, full bodied palate of white and red fruits, broad but with no hint at all of the oak ageing, with lovely fresh acidity and a long concentrated finish. Deliciously drinkable now but will also grow and evolve over the next couple of years.

"Beautifully balanced and incredibly mouth-watering, but produced in only tiny quantities, La Source Rosé 2012 is undoubtedly the finest vintage to date. If you really want to treat yourself, then this super-cuvee rose, which is sensitively oaked, more structured in style and absolutely drop-dead gorgeous is available now."
Matthew Jukes

"A blend of Merlot and Cabernet Franc, this Bordeaux wine has a delicate color with some juicy summer fruit, especially young raspberries. A trace of mineral backbone gives this a brisk finish."
Will Lyons, Wall Street Journal
